After the gulf of Melas is the Thracian Chersonese; the cities in it are these: Kardia, Ide, Paeon, Alopekonnesos, Araplos (or Drabos?), Elaious, Madytos, and six stades away Sestos at the mouth of the Propontis. Within the River Aix (i.e. Aigospotamos) are Kressa, Krithote and Pactye. Up to this point is the Thracian Chersonese. It is a journey on foot of 40 stades from sea to sea along the ridge of the isthmus. In the centre of the isthmus is a city called Agora. The length of the Chersonese from Kardia to Elaious, where it is at its broadest, is 400 stades.

The Thracian Chersonese lies close by. Its first city is Kardia, originally founded by Milesians and people from Clazomenae, but settled for a second time by Athenians at the time when Miltiades subdued the Chersonese. Near it is Lysimachia. The eponymous Lysimachus founded it from his own city. Next are the “Swamps” (Limnai) of the Milesians, then Alopekonnesos, city of the Aeolians. Next is Elaeus with its Attic colony, which Phorbas is thought to have founded. Following this are Sestos and Madytos which lie at the narrowest part of the Straits. They were founded by people from Lesbos. Then there are Krithote and the city Pactye which are said to have been founded by Miltiades. (Trans. J. Sheldon for the Archivum Callipolitanum project, unpublished.)

Καλλίπολις, πολίχνιον Λαμψάκου ἐν τῇ περαίᾳ τῆς Χερσονήσου ἐπ' ἀκτῆς κειμένη, ὡς Ἀλέξανδρος ἐν τῷ περὶ Βιθυνίας.

Kallipolis, the village of Lampsakos on the further shore of the Chersonese situated at its tip, as we find in Alexander’s discussion of Bithynia. (Trans. J. Sheldon for the Archivum Callipolitanum project, unpublished.)

LIVIUS
Ab Urbe Condita

XXXI, 16, 5-6:

Inde progressus ad Chersonesum Elaeunta et Alopeconnesum tradentibus ipsis recipit; 6. Callipolis quoque et Madytos deditae et castella quaedam ignobilia. Abydeni ne legatis quidem admissis regi portas clauerunt. ea oppugnatio diu Philippum tenuit, eripique ex obsidione, ni cessatum ab Attalo et Rhodiis foret, potuerunt.

Proceeding from there to the Chersonese he (Philip) took Elaeus and Alopeconnesus when they surrendered to him; Callipolis and Madytos also surrendered as well as a few less well known fortresses. (Trans. J. Sheldon for the Archivum Callipolitanum project, unpublished.)

53 (54) On the isthmus of the Chersonesus are situated three cities: near the Melas Gulf, Kardia and near the Propontis, Pactye, and near the middle Lysimacheia. The length of the isthmus is forty stadia. 54 (55). The name of the city Elaious is masculine; and perhaps also that of the city Trapezus. 55 (56). On this voyage along the coast of the Chersonesus after leaving Elaious, one comes first to the entrance which leads through the narrows into the Propontis; and this entrance is called the beginning of the Hellespont. And here is the cape called the Kynos-Sema; though some call it Hecabe's (i.e. Hecuba's) Sema; and in fact her tomb is pointed out after one has doubled the cape. Then one comes to Madytus, and to Cape Sestias, where the pontoon-bridge of Xerxes was built; and, after these, to Sestos. The distance from Elaious to the place of the pontoon-bridge is one hundred and seventy stadia. After Sestos one comes to Aegospotamoi, eighty stadia, a town which has been razed to the ground, where it is said, the stone fell at the time of the Persian war. Then comes Kallipolis, from which the distance across to Lampsakos in Asia is forty stadia; then Krithote, a little town which has been razed to the ground; then Pactye; then Macron Teichos (lit. 'long wall'), Leuce Acte (lit. 'white beach'), Hieron Oros (lit. 'sacred mountain') and Perinthos, founded by the Samians: then Sely(m)bria. Above these places lies Silta (mod. Schandu); and the Hieros Oros is revered by all the natives and is a sort of acropolis of the country. The Hieron Oros discharges asphalt into the sea, near the place where the Proconnesos, only one hundred and twenty stadia distant, is nearest to the land; and the quarry of white marble in the Proconnesos is both large and excellent. After Sely(m)bria come the Rivers Athyras and Bathynias; and then, Byzantium and the places which come in order thereafter as far as the Cyanean Rocks. (Trans. H.L. Jones, Loeb Strabo iii, London, 1924, 54.)

XIII,1,18:

Καὶ ἡ Λάμψακος δ' ἐπὶ θαλάττῃ πόλις ἔστιν εὐλίμενος καὶ ἀξιόλογος, συμμένουσα καλῶς, ὥσπερ καὶ ἡ Ἄβυδος· διέχει δ' αὐτῆς ὅσον ἐβδομήκοντα καὶ ἑκατὸν σταδίους· ἐκαλείτο δὲ πρότερον Πιτυοῦσσα, καθάπερ καὶ τὴν Χίον φασίν· ἐν δὲ τῇ περαίᾳ τῆς Χερρονήσου πολίχνιον ἔστι Καλλίπολις· κεῖται δ' ἐπὶ ἄκτῃ ἐκκειμένη πολὺ πρὸς τὴν Ἀσίαν κατὰ τὴν Λαμψακηνῶν πόλιν, ὥστε τὸ δίαρμα μὴ πλέον εἶναι τετταράκοντα

Lampsakos, also, a city on the sea, a notable city with a good harbour, and still flourishing like Abydos. It is about one hundred and seventy stadia distant from Abydos; and it was formerly called Pityussa, as also, it is said, was Chios. On the opposite shore of the Chersonesus is Kallipolis, a small town. It is on the headland and runs far out towards Asia in the direction of the city of the Lampsakeni, so that the passage across to Asia from it is no more than forty stadia. (Trans. H.L. Jones, Loeb Strabo vi, London, 1924, 32-35.)

PLINIUS (MAJOR)
Historia Naturalis

IV,49:

Et Hellespontus VII, ut diximus, stadiis Europam ab Asia dividens, IIII inter se contrarias urbes habet, in Europa Callipolim et Seston, in Asia Lamsacu et Abydon. dein promunturium Cherronesi Mastusia adversum Sigeo, cuius in fronte obliqua Cynossema - ita appellatur Hecubae tumulus-, statio Achaeorum et turris, delubrum Protesilai et in extrema Cherronesi fronte, quae vocatur Aeolium, oppidum Elaeus.

Also the Hellespont which we have said divides Europe from Asia by a space not quite a mile across, have four cities facing one another on the opposite sides, Callipolis and Sestos in Europe and Lampsacus and Abydus in Asia. On the Chersonese there is the promontory of Mastusia opposite to Sigeum, on the slanting side of which is Cynossema - the name given to the funeral mound of Hecuba -, the naval station of the Greeks in the Trojan war, and a tower, the shrine of Protesilaus, and at the point of the peninsula, which is called Aeolium, the town of Elaeus. (Trans. H. Rackham, LCL ii, London and Cambridge, MA, 1942, 155, substantially revised.)

AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS Res Gestae

XXII,8,4:

Hinc gracilescens paulatim et velut naturali quodam commercio ruens in Pontum eiusque partem ad se iungens, in speciem φ litterae Graecae formatur, exin Hellespontum a Rhodopa scindens, Cynossema (ubi sepulta creditur Hecuba) et Coelan praeterlabitur et Seston et Callipolin. Contra per Achillis Aiacisque sepulchra, Dardanum contingit et Abydon, unde iunctis pontibus Xerxes maria pedibus peragravit, dein Mapsacym Themistocli dono datam a rege Persarum, et Parion quam condidit Iasionis filius Paris. 5. Unde semiorebe curvescens altrinsecus, lataque aperiens terrarum divortia, circumfluis spatiis Propontidos respergit ex eoo latere Cyzicum, et Dindyma (religiosa Matris Magnae delubra), et Apamiam Ciumque, ubi Hylam et Astacum secuto tempore Nicomediam a rege cognominatam, qua in occasum procedit Cherronesum pulsat et Aegospotamus, in quo loco lapides casuros ex caelo praedixit Anaxagoras, et Lysimachiam et civitatem, quem Hercules conditam Perinthi comitis sui memoriae dedicavit. 6. Et ut effecte pleneque φ litterae figura servetur, in meditullio ipso rotunditatis Proconesus insula est oblonga et Besbicus.

From there (the Troad), the Aegean gradually grows narrower and flows as if by a kind of natural union into the Pontus; and joining with a part of this it takes the form of a Greek letter Φ. Then it separates (the province) Hellespontus from the province of Rhodopa and flows past Cynossema, where Hecuba is supposed to be buried, and Coela, Sestos and Callipolis. On the opposite side it washes the tombs of Achilles and Ajax, and Dardanus and Abydus, from which Xerxes built a bridge and crossed the sea on foot; then Lampsacus, which the Persian king gave to Themistocles as a gift and Parion, founded by Paris, the son of Iasion. 5. Then swelling on both sides into the form of a half-circle and giving a view of widely separated lands, it laves with the spreading waters of the Propontis, on the eastern side Cyzicus and Dindyma, where there is a sacred shrine of the Great Mother, and Apamia and Cius, where Hylas was pursued and carried off by the nymph, and Astacus, in a later age called after King Nicomedes. Where it turns to the westward it beats upon the Cherronesus and Aegospotami, where Anaxagoras predicted a rain of stones from heaven, and Lysimachia and the city which Hercules founded (i.e. Heraclea) and dedicated to the name of his comrade Perinthus; 6. and in order to keep the form of the letter Φ full and complete, in the very middle of the circle lies the oblong island of Proconesos, and Besbicus. (Trans. J.C. Rolfe, Loeb, ii, @@@, modified.)

From North to South as far as the centre of the southern tip, the eastern coastline of the Chersonese is washed by the Hellespont. Only a narrow piece of land a mere forty stades across prevents the Hellespont from making an island of it. 2. Across this isthmus a continuous fortified wall stretches from coast to coast. Behind the wall are ranged the towns of Aphrodisias, Thescos, and Ciberis, and at a very great distance from them near the strait itself, where the coastline forms a sharp angle, stands the town of Sestos, renowned in poetry, doubtless because of its associations with the story of Hero's lamp and of the death of her lover Leander. 3. Not far from Sestos is another small town which despite its extreme smallness, its lack of beauty and generally unprepossessing appearance is called Kallipolis. The surrounding country is graced with fields and roadsteads, dotted with a great variety of trees and blessed with streams of good drinking water and with a rich, fertile soil that produces a plentiful store of all the necessities of life. The wall, then, encloses within its confines so many towns and such an extensive area of ground as to make an enemy attack no easy matter. (Trans. J.C.
