CONTRIBUTORS

Kate Chetty is currently an acting Deputy Defence General Counsel at the Department of Defence, practising in government and administrative law. She is also a sessional lecturer at the University of Canberra, and convenes the unit Law of Communication. Kate's research interests are in constitutional rights, the separation of judicial power, and the defence power. As well as law, Kate has qualifications in communications (advertising and marketing) and is currently undertaking a Master of Business.

David Clark is a Professor of Law at Flinders University specialising in public law and constitutional history. He has published widely in Australia and in international publications, especially on habeas corpus and Magna Carta. His principle work considers the modern echoes of key constitutional inheritances. His current work considers the Australian uses of the Bill of Rights 1689. He also combines his academic work with practical legal activities. In 2016, for example, he took part in constitutional reform discussions in Tasmania and was a member of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association delegation to Samoa where he conducted post election seminars on parliamentary privilege.

Eliza Fitzgerald is a 2015 graduate of Macquarie University, having completed a Bachelor of Laws with first class honours and a Bachelor of Arts majoring in English Literature. Her research interest in public international law began after competing in the Philip C. Jessup International Law Moot, where her team placed third in the Australian rounds. She currently works in the Constitutional & Native Title Law Group at the NSW Crown Solicitor's Office.

Michael Legg is an Associate Professor, UNSW Law Australia and Director of the IMF Bentham Class Actions Initiative at UNSW Law. He is an expert in civil procedure and complex litigation including class actions and regulatory litigation. Michael is the author of ‘Complex Civil Litigation and Case Management’ (2011) Federation Press and co-author of ‘Annotated Class Actions Legislation’ (2014) LexisNexis and ‘Civil Procedure in New South Wales’ (2016) Thomson Reuters. He is also admitted as a legal practitioner in Australia and the USA where he has acted on class actions and other high stakes, bet-the-company litigation. Michael is a member of the Law Council of Australia's Class Actions Committee, the Law Society of NSW's Future Committee and a member of the board of directors of the Australian Pro Bono Centre.

Peter Radan is a Professor of Law at Macquarie University and a Fellow of the Australian Academy of Law. His teaching is primarily in the areas of contract law and equity and trusts, areas in which he has co-authored both textbooks and casebooks. His research areas are in contracts, equity and trusts, and secession.

Ava Sidhu holds an LLB (Hons) degree from the University of Singapore, and LLM and M Phil degrees from the University of Western Australia. She is a lecturer with The University of Notre Dame Australia. Her previous experience includes practising as an advocate and solicitor at the Singapore Bar, working as a legal officer, as well as serving as the Associate Editor of the University of Notre Dame Australia Law Review. Her areas of research include the law of remedies, contract and torts.
Gillian Triggs is an Emeritus Professor and is the President of the Australian Human Rights Commission, with a five year appointment. She was Dean of the Faculty of Law and Challis Professor of International Law at the University of Sydney from 2007-12 and Director of the British Institute of International and Comparative Law from 2005-7. She is a former Barrister and a Governor of the College of Law. Professor Triggs has combined an academic career with international commercial legal practice and has advised the Australian and other governments and international organisations on international legal and trade disputes. Her focus at the Commission is on the implementation in Australian law of the human rights treaties to which Australia is a party, and to work with nations in the Asia Pacific region on practical approaches to human rights. Professor Triggs’ is the author of many books and papers on international law, including International Law, Contemporary Principles and Practices (2nd Ed, 2011).

Max Turner is a fifth year student undertaking a Bachelor of Laws with a Bachelor of Arts majoring in German Studies at Macquarie University. He is currently a Student Editor of the Macquarie Law Journal and is thrilled to have made his first contribution to an academic journal. His academic interests include contract law, competition law, administrative law and civil procedure, whereas his extra-curricular interests include travelling, mooting and enjoying all codes of rugby. Max looks forward to commencing as a graduate at Herbert Smith Freehills in 2018.
