

Are you a health professional who worked in Nauru Detention Centre?

TO TAKE PART IN THIS RESEARCH OR FOR MORE DETAILS CONTACT KIM ELKOVICH VIA EMAIL
kim.elkovich@hdr.mq.edu.au

Exploring the Ethical Climate of Health Professionals working in Restricted Environments: A Case Example

Delivering health care deemed to be of an “equivalent” standard within restricted environments such as off detention poses ethical dilemmas. The governing systems for restricted environments may have implications for the freedoms of those receiving care.

Health professional’s working in such environments may experience ethical challenges when conflicted between their duty of care for the health and well- being of their consumers and employer contractual obligations.

This can give rise to health professionals experiencing ethical dilemmas with implications for themselves and the quality and safety of those they care for.

We are interested in your experience

Macquarie University Human Research Ethics Committee Approval No: 520211056632441

What is required?

- An Interview - either face to face or online. Participant choice.
- An audio recording of the interview which will then be transcribed.

Confidentiality?

- Your name and any identifying information will be de-identified via coding.
- The audio file post transcribing is destroyed
- All personally de-identifying information will be stored on an encrypted hard drive and deleted seven years after completion of the study.

Who is eligible?

- You are an AHPRA registered health professional or AASW registered social worker
- You were contracted to and delivered health care to asylum seekers detained in Nauru for a minimum of three months.
- Are not bound by a current confidentiality agreement.

Want to Participate? Contact

kim.elkovich@hdr.mq.edu.au

Phone: M 0439 300 614

MACQUARIE
University
SYDNEY · AUSTRALIA