

For direct admission into an undergraduate (bachelor) degree, you will need one of the following qualifications:

- a recognised high school qualification or university entrance exam – see the chart for a selection of accepted qualifications;
- a recognised university foundation course – we accept foundation courses from most Australian universities, as well as from some approved international providers;
- a recognised diploma or associate degree deemed equivalent to an Australian diploma or advanced diploma level;
- at least one year of a university degree from a recognised institution deemed equivalent to an Australian bachelor or master degree level.

Macquarie uses a selection rank based on the Australian Tertiary Admission Rank (ATAR) to determine the minimum eligibility requirements for entry to each undergraduate course. See the table for conversion of the selection rank to the minimum score you need for your qualification.

If you have not met the minimum eligibility requirements for your selected course, don't worry. Macquarie University College offers a range of pathway programs to prepare you for seamless transition to university studies. Scholarships are available for undergraduate and postgraduate students of select countries.
