Welcome to our seventh edition of the HoWRU Newsletter. In this edition, we shine a light on some of our achievements, research programs and leading researchers.

WHAT IS THE HoWRU?
We are a Macquarie Business School research collaborative that aims to foster and advance human health and wellbeing through innovative organizational and system design and management. We bring together researchers from marketing and management who join academics and researchers from across health, medicine and psychology.

STRENGTHENING PARTNERSHIPS
HoWRU welcomed Paula Brough, Ashlea Troth, and Carys Chan from Griffith University’s Centre for Work, Organisation, and Wellbeing (WOW) to our first in-person planning meeting at Macquarie Business School in July. This was a wonderful way to for the HoWRU and WOW teams to explore ideas for some exciting new projects and to share research ideas and insights. Future plans include joint WOW & HoWRU workshops in December on the Gold Coast and a national symposium to be held in Sydney in September 2023.

HoWRU and DoM RESEARCH SEMINAR SERIES
Over the last several months, the Department of Management and HoWRU have presented a series of joint virtual research seminars with aim of fostering the professional development of both junior and senior scholars, as well as providing a vehicle to share ideas and nurture research relationships. These well-attended seminars have included:

• “Creating Engaged and Collaborative Research Partnerships to Advance Knowledge on Well-being & Performance at Work” (presented by Helena Nguyen and Anya Johnson from the University of Sydney’s Body, Heart, and Mind (BHM) Research Group in April).
• “Replication vs. Re-examination: Management science’s chance to get it right” (presented by Tine Köhler, from the University of Melbourne in April)
• “Writing Systematic Review Papers” (presented by Alexander Newman, Director of Centre for Refugee Employment, Advocacy, Training and Education (CREATE), Deakin University in July)

INTERNATIONAL RECOGNITION

Some of our conference papers, from academic leads and HDR students are included in the publication list below showcasing the wide-ranging and impactful research that is being led by HoWRU scholars.

Creating A Better World Together

EXCITING RESEARCH COLLABORATION!

Professor Denise Jepsen is working on a new research project for the NSW Government’s Centre for Work Health and Safety, partnering with The Behavioural Insights Team and colleagues at the University of Sydney and the University of Melbourne. The team is studying the health and safety risks and harms that in-home aged and disability care workers face on the job, and the potential prevention strategies. The goal of this critical research is to determine what influences those risks and harms, and the kinds of training and tools that will work best to reduce or eliminate them. You can read more about Denise’s research here.

WELL-DESERVED PROMOTION

Congratulations to our HoWRU team member Nidthida Lin who has recently been promoted to Professor. You can read more about Nidthida’s research here.

HoWRU SMALL GRANTS AWARDED

Congratulations to the recipients of the recent HoWRU small grant awards. Candy Lu, Jun Gu and Sophia Cao were successful in their applications for funding to support their proposed research projects, while Lara Tolentino and Candy Lu were awarded funding to attend the Academy of Management conference.

WELCOME TO NEW HOWRU MEMBERS!

It has been a busy few months for HoWRU, with an increased interest in our work and a significant growth in our membership. We would like to extend a very warm welcome to the following new members:

Rico Piehler is one of our newest full members and is a Senior Lecturer at the Department of Marketing. His research interests are in internal & employer branding, brand communication & social media marketing, city branding, brand competitiveness and the academic-practitioner gap. His research projects often deal with employee-related outcomes, such as identification, commitment and citizenship behaviour, as well as managerial antecedents, such as internal and external communication, leadership and human resource management. Rico has experience in developing and managing collaborations with companies, government bodies, professional associations and management consulting firms. He has consulted companies from diverse industries on strategic branding issues (e.g., brand positioning, brand strategy, brand identity).

Lauren Gellatly has been working at Macquarie since 2010 in various roles including teaching in Marketing and Management, as well as having RA roles. Some of these have evolved into projects which she has been invited to work on as a co-author. Her thesis is somewhat cross-disciplinary as it looks at how communication affects employee motivation, persistence and performance.

Kompal Sinha is an Associate Professor with the Department of Economics at Macquarie University. Her areas of interest include Applied Econometrics, Machine Learning, Health Economics, and Development Economics.

Pardis Mohajerani is a Lecturer in Marketing-Consumer Health & Well-being, Acting Course Director of Master of Marketing and Acting Head of Marketing Specialisation in Master of Commerce. He is currently leading two health and well-being projects which are healthy lifestyle behaviours among Australian Gen Y and Gamifications and Mental well-being.

HoWRU also wants to extend a big welcome to its new Higher Degree Research (HDR) Members!

Sophia Cai is interested in status as it pertains to social influence and leadership. Her dissertation focuses on how helping behavior – previously viewed as a status-enhancing behavior due to its prosocial nature – can lower a person’s status within groups and organizations.

Liming Zhao is interested in corporate social responsibility (e.g., environmental responsibility, employee wellbeing), top management team, and corporate innovation.

Jayaranjani Sutha is interested in the role of perceived equity sensitivity on employees’ engagement in non-mandatory training: the role of psychological egoism.

Sadhana Singh is researching the role of family dynamics and person factors in shaping next-generation engagement in family firms: A social cognitive career theory approach.

Teng Li is researching the Formation of Leadership Empowerment Behavior and its Double-edged Effect as Job Demand and Resource and the impact on the mental health and well-being of employees.

MEDIA MENTIONS

Demonstrating her national reputation and world-leading expertise, Professor Louise Thornthwaite was called as an Expert Witness for a recent industrial award hearing in the NSW Industrial Commission. Her expert witness report and cross-examination in the Commission was on the topic of workers’ compensation, income benefit step-downs and the return to work of injured workers. Louise’s academic success is matched by her industry impact!

In April, Denise Jepsen published an opinion article for Australian Ageing Agenda, providing advice to the aged care industry on attraction, recruitment and selection issues following the Fair Work Commission’s aged care industry work value case.

In another article, she also drew attention to the importance of sick leave for casual workers in the residential aged care sector.

Leanne Carter and Cynthia Webster, were recently featured in The Lighthouse for their innovative 5-year research initiative to improve the drinking culture among Australian youth, identifying education as the key to reversing binge-drinking culture. There are plans to extend the pilot program to regional areas of NSW and eventually integrate the initiative into school PDHPE programs. You can read more about this valuable research program here.

Laramie Tolentino was quoted in Hays Australia’s career development article on quiet quitting, highlighting informal support from leaders is critical, particularly in times of crisis.
