The following information is provided as general guidance to applicants and students intending on progressing to an APAC accredited Honours year.

An Honours year in Psychology is intended for high-achieving students aiming for a career in research or a specialist field such as clinical neuropsychology, clinical psychology, organisational psychology or professional psychology. Your studies will include a focus on professional ethics, evidenced-based practices, advanced topics in contemporary issues in psychology and professional practice, further training in the analysis of data and research methodologies, and you will conduct a substantive piece of research. # HONOURS DEGREE

There are currently two pathways into an Honours year in Psychology at Macquarie University. This course is suitable for students intending to progress to post graduate studies to become a registered psychologist or a PhD.

The Bachelor of Psychological Sciences (Honours) is a stand-alone, one-year course. Further information is available on the MQ website.

- Students enrolled in double degrees must complete both degrees or exit with the Bachelor of Psychology or equivalent Level 1 APAC accredited course to be eligible to apply for the Bachelor of Psychological Sciences (Honours).
- Late applications will not be accepted. If you miss the closing date you can apply for the following year's intake.

The Bachelor of Psychology (Honours) includes an embedded honours year in the fourth year of the course. All students enrolled in the Bachelor of Psychology (Honours) must apply for the fourth year to be considered for progression. Continuing to the fourth year is not guaranteed and is competitive. More information is available in the course notes in the MQ Handbook for the year you commenced the degree (2020, 2021, 2022, 2023).

- The above information also applies to students enrolled in double degrees. It is recommended to apply for the Honours year after completing all other requirements, however only the Bachelor of Psychology (Honours) components with a minimum of 240 credit points must be completed to be eligible to apply for progression into the Honours year.
- Late applications will not be accepted. If you miss the closing date, depending on your circumstances you may need to apply to exit with a Bachelor of Psychology/Bachelor of Arts – Psychology (depending on your commencement year) or, if eligible, could take 12 months leave of absence. You must ensure that you apply on time the following year.

HONOURS WELCOME

The Honours year will begin with a mandatory, in-person Honours Welcome Orientation for all Honours students commencing that year. The welcome will cover the expectations for the Honours year, information about the timetable, streams in Advanced Topics in Psychology Honours units and the Thesis.

2026 In-person Honours Welcome – Friday, 20 February 2026

THESIS TOPIC

As part of your application, you will be asked to complete a question providing your preference of Thesis Research Topic Area. A link to the list will be provided in the application form.

Every effort is taken to accommodate student preference; however, this may not always be possible. Completing a thesis in an area of study less familiar to you will provide you with a well-rounded understanding of Psychology should you wish to pursue postgraduate study.

ENROLMENT

Your ability to enrol will be dependent on the course you are admitted to as explained in the following page.
