

What do 5100 consumers think of our health system?

You are invited to the official launch of the latest Australian Health Consumer Sentiment Survey

Free registration

The Australian Health Consumer Sentiment Survey is a joint initiative of the Australian Institute of Health Innovation, the National Health and Medical Research Council Partnership Centre for Health System Sustainability and the Consumers Health Forum of Australia. It is the largest health study in Australia based on the general population and provides a national snapshot of health service access, satisfaction and experiences of 5100 consumers before and during the COVID-19 pandemic.

A virtual launch will be held at 12noon on Monday 28 March (Federal Budget Week) providing key stakeholders with the opportunity to hear the latest findings and watch a live panel discussion with leading experts.

We look forward to sharing these important insights with you. Registration is free and essential.

The Australian Institute of Health Innovation (AIHI) at Macquarie University conducts world-class research with national and international research communities, governments, policymakers, providers of health services, managers, clinicians, patients and the community. Our work underpins health reforms and systems improvement, providing new tools, perspectives and evidence to help stakeholders who are interested in making the health system more effective, efficient and productive. Our overarching aim is to produce new, high quality research evidence to support change, prevention and improvement.
