A MONUMENT TO THE SPREAD OF THE SYRIAN BRILLIANT TEACHING IN CHINA

TRANSLATOR: DR DAVID WILMSHURST
(REVISED BY PROF. SAM LIEU)

§1. [1] In order that the reader may fully admire this Monument to the Spread of the Brilliant Teaching in China, the following exposition has been written by Jingjing (Ching-ching), [2] a monk of the Syrian (Chin. Daqin / Ta-ts’in i.e. ‘Roman’) Monastery.

[S1] ‘d’m qšyš’ wqwr’y psqwp’ wp’pšy dzynst’n
Adams, priest, country-bishop, and spiritual father of China.

§2. [3] In the beginning was GOD (Chin. Āluōhē <Syr. Alāhā) the eternal, unchanging, and omnipotent; who was there before all things were made, and who will remain when all things have perished; himself supremely good and the source of all wisdom and nobility in men; the master and maker of all things; our mysterious Trinity. He made the four quarters of the world; he set his spirit in motion and created [4] darkness and void. He made light from darkness and matter from void, and separated the earth from the sky. He made all things and saw that they were good, and created the first man. He made him wise and just, and gave him authority over all living things. He made him not proud, but humble; not greedy, but content with what he had. But SATAN (Chin. Suōdān <Syr. Sāṭānā), the father of lies, corrupted him. Disguised as a good angel, he told the man that he could be equal with GOD. The man believed his lies, [5] and evil came into the world.

§3. Unity and harmony departed, and there were countless quarrels between men of different ideas, some teaching one thing and others another. Some men set up material things as the

1 Adam qshisha w’kurapisqpa w’papash d’Sinistan. Sinistan is a well-attested Persian name for China. The normal Syriac name for China was Beth Sinaye,‘the country of the Chinese’. The term Sinaye,‘Chinese’, occurs in the phrase malke d’Sinaye,‘rulers of the Chinese’, in paragraph 24a. The term papash, ‘pope’ or ‘spiritual head’, is equally rare.

2 A-lo-ho, a transliteration of the Syriac Allaha, ‘God’.

3 Sa-tan, a transliteration of the Syriac Tsatana, ‘Satan’.
objects of their worship; some said that all existence was meaningless and did not distinguish between right and wrong; some tried to find happiness through rituals and sacrifices; some rejected goodness altogether and sought only power over other men. Their minds were in torment and their hearts were in agony. [6] They longed for escape from the fires of guilt which tormented them. But the more they struggled, the deeper they sank into darkness. At last, in despair, they stopped looking for truth.

§4. Then one person of our Trinity, the brilliant and reverend Christ (Chin. Míshìhā, i.e. Messiah), veiling and hiding his true majesty, came to earth in the likeness of man. Angels proclaimed the good news; a virgin gave birth to a saint in Syria (Chin. Daqin / Ta-ts’in i.e. ‘Roman’). A bright star told of good fortune; Persians saw its glory and came to offer gifts. [7] The wise prophets of old gave the law to men, teaching that they must practise good works. Christ fulfilled this law, but also sent men the spirit of God, so that they could find salvation through faith as well as works. He gave men eight rules for living well, and taught them to resist the desires of the flesh, and to seek truth and purity. He told men to trust God, to hope for their salvation, and to love their fellow men. He gave men life, and conquered death. He hung up the brilliant sun to storm the halls of darkness, and defeated the snares of Satan. [5] In his mercy, [8] he won entrance to heaven for the souls of men, and saved them from the fate which their wickedness deserved. His saving work complete, he returned to heaven.

§5. He left twenty-seven books of scripture, which explain how men can reform their hearts and find salvation. [6] They tell us that if a man is washed in water and the spirit, he will become clean and pure. We, his ministers, carry the Cross (Chin. 十字 shìzi lit. ‘the character ten’) to symbolise that our teaching is open to men in all four quarters of the world. We strike wooden gongs to awaken feelings of love and kindness. [7] We worship towards the east to show that we are travelling along the road of life and glory. We grow our beards to show that our duties are towards others, and we shave the crown of the head to show that our thoughts

5 The sole reference to the Crucifixion in the Sian Tablet inscription, and deliberately oblique. Elsewhere the Christian cross is explained as a symbol of the universality of the Christian message, representing the four cardinal compass points (paragraph 5).
6 Twenty-seven. The figure is presumably a mistake, as the East Syrian church recognised the canonical twenty-three books of the New Testament.
7 Christians living under Moslem rule (as most East Syrian Christians were at this period) were forbidden to compete with the sound of the muezzin, the Moslem call to worship, by ringing church bells. However, priests were allowed to beat muffled wooden gongs to call congregations to church services, and this practice eventually became traditional.
are not centred on ourselves. We do not keep slaves, and we honour rich and poor equally. We do not amass goods and wealth, and we share all we have among ourselves. We seek to purify ourselves by fasting and meditation. We worship seven times a day, and pray for the salvation of both the living and the dead. Once every seven days we hold a public service to cleanse our hearts and rededicate ourselves to purity.

§6. This true and unchanging way is hard to describe, and harder to name. Because it is clearly beneficial and useful, we have tried our best to capture its essence by calling it the ‘brilliant teaching’. Nevertheless, just as a ruler can only flourish by following our teaching, so our teaching can only flourish under a sympathetic ruler. Whenever our teaching meets a wise sovereign, it civilises and enlightens the world.

§7. In the ninth Zhenguang (Cheng-kuan) year (635 CE), when the accomplished emperor T’ai-tsung [626–49] was beginning his prosperous reign in glory and splendour, ruling the people wisely and well, bishop [11] Aluoben (A-lo-pen) from the land of Syria came to Chang’an (Ch’ang-an). Forewarned by the blue clouds and the harmony of the winds, he hurried through difficulties and dangers to China, carrying books which proclaimed the truth. The emperor sent the minister of state, Duke Fang Xuanling (Fang Hsuan-ling), to take an escort to the west suburb to welcome the guest and bring him to the palace. When the books had been translated in the library and the doctrine examined in his private apartments, the emperor was convinced of their propriety and truth and personally ordered their preaching and transmission. In the twelfth Zhenguang (Cheng-kuan) [12] year (638 CE), in the autumn in the seventh month, it was decreed:

§8. Truth can be recognized, whatever its name. Wisdom can be discerned, whoever its possessor. Every region has its own appropriate doctrine, which by its pervasive influence benefits the inhabitants. The Syrian bishop Aluoben (A-lo-pen) has come to our great capital from afar with the ‘brilliant teaching’. We have carefully examined this teaching, and find it challenging, humbling, and comforting. We have studied its principles, and are satisfied that they lay stress on the essentials of life. Its language is spare and elegant, and its thought is coherent. [13] It is without doubt a helpful doctrine: let it be admitted to our empire. Let a

8 Slavery was normal both in China and throughout the Arab world at this period. During the T’ang (Tang) dynasty the slave-market in Ch’ang-an was the largest in the world. Red-haired girls, supplied by Arab pirates from Spain and Britain, were particularly prized for their rarity value.
9 Perhaps representing the Syriac name Yahballaha, ‘Gift of God’.
10 An extraordinary mark of respect. Fang Hsuan-ling was T’ai-tsung’s prime minister at this period, and most important decisions were taken by a closed triumvirate consisting of the emperor himself, Fang Hsuan-ling, and Wei Cheng.
monastery be built in our capital by the relevant board in the I-ning ward, and let twenty-one monks be appointed there.

§9. The glory of the Zhou (Chou) Dynasty departed, and Laozi (Lao-tzu) rode into the west in a dark chariot. Now a brilliant breeze blew towards the east, and the great T'ang (Tang) shone in its splendour. Officers were told to have the emperor’s portrait copied on the walls of our monastery. The emperor’s handsome features decorated its brilliant gates: the wisdom of his expression was a constant inspiration to our community.

§10. According to the Illustrated Records of Western Lands and the Histories of the Han and Wei Dynasties the land of Syria is bounded on the south by the Coral Sea; on the north it stretches to the Mountain of All Precious Things; on the west it looks towards the flowery forests on the Borders of the Immortals; and on the east it lies open to the Long Winds and the Weak Water. The country produces asbestos, spices that restore the soul, bright-moon pearls, and rings that shine in the night. Theft and robbery are unknown, and the people enjoy happiness and peace. No law but the brilliant is permitted, none but virtuous rulers are tolerated. The lands are extensive and broad, the civilisation prosperous and enlightened.

§11. The great emperor Gaozong (Kao-tsung) (r. 649–83 CE) piously followed the policy of his predecessors. A generous and elegant patron of the truth, he caused brilliant monasteries to be built in all the departments. He also raised Alouben (A-lo-pen) (<Syr. Rabban ‘teacher’?) to the rank of Great Spiritual Lord for the protection of the state. The brilliant teaching spread through the ten provinces and the kingdom enjoyed great prosperity. Monasteries occupied a hundred cities, and the people enjoyed brilliant happiness.

11The text of this imperial decree has been independently preserved in the T’ang (Tang) Hui-yao. This version has been slightly amended to harmonise its contents with the current official name for Christianity, the ‘Syrian brilliant teaching’, Ta-ch’ in ching-chiao. In the original version, the fourth sentence read ‘The Persian bishop A-lo-pen has come to our great capital from afar with the teaching of the scriptures (ching-chiao)’.

12An interesting and daring passage which links the Han and T’ang (Tang) dynasties and unfavourably compares Taoism with Christianity. The Han dynasty, which had exalted the teachings of the Taoists, modelled itself on the fancied glories of the Chou dynasty, and its extinction in the second century (“the glory of the Chou dynasty departed”) had resulted in three centuries of chaos in China, which were only ended with the establishment of the T’ang (Tang) dynasty. The author implies that the teachings of Lao Tzu were unable to prevent the collapse of the Han, and goes on to suggest that the founder of the T’ang (Tang) dynasty was favoured by a ‘brilliant breeze’ from the West; in other words that the present dynasty, which had restored peace and order to China, was under the patronage of the Christian God.
§12. In the Shengli (Sheng-li) years (698-99 CE) the Buddhists arrogantly criticised us in the Eastern Zhou (Chou) (i.e. Luoyang): at the end of Xiantian (Hsien-t’ien) year (712 CE) the Daoists (Taoists), puffed up with their own importance, attacked us bitterly in the Western Hao (i.e. Chang’an). But the chief monk Alohan (A-lo-han) and bishop Jilie (Chi-chieh), both noble men from the west, dedicated to spiritual values, came to our aid. They supported together the mystic cord and joined in tying [17] the broken knot.

玄宗至系道皇帝。令寧國等五王親臨福宇建立壇場。法棲暫廬而更崇。道石時傾而復正。天寶初。今大將軍高力士送五聖寫真寺內安置。賜絹百[18]匹。奉慶睿圖。龍髯雖遠。弓劍可攀。日角舒光。天顏咫尺。

§13. The devout emperor Xuanzong (Hsuan-tsung) (712–56 CE) ordered the prince of Ningguo (Ning-kuo) and the four other princes to go in person to our blessed monastery to rebuild the altars and courts. The beam of the religion had been weak for a moment but was raised again; the stone of the Way had been thrown down for a time but now stood upright once more. At the beginning of Tianbao (T’ien-pao) (742 CE) he ordered Gao Lishi (Kao Lishih), the commander-in-chief, to send us portraits of the five emperors to hang in the monastery, and to present us with a hundred [18] rolls of silk. We received them with great respect, and admired the wise emperors’ portraits. Though the emperor’s beard was far away, we could touch his bow and sword: shining in the sun’s rays, the divine faces were within arm’s reach.

三載大秦國有僧佇和。膽星向化。望日朝尊。詔僧羅含僧普論等一七人。與大德佇和。於興慶宮修功德。於[19]是天題寺勝。額戴龍書。寶裝璀璨。灼爍丹霞。睿扎宏空。騰凌激日。寵霽比南山峻極。沛澤與東海齊深。

§14. In the third year of Tianbao (T’ien-pao) (744 CE), the monk Jihe (Chi-ho) (Gabriel ?) arrived from Syria. Observing the stars, he travelled to this admirable land; following the sun, he came to do reverence to the emperor. The emperor decreed that the priests Alohan (A-lo-han) (Abraham ?), Pulun (Pu-lun) (Paul) and others, seven in all, along with bishop Jihe (Chi-ho), should offer prayers for the empire in the Xingqing (Hsing-ching) palace. [19] The emperor then composed a motto for the monastery, and its name-board displayed the imperial hand-writing. The precious ornament was like a gem or a kingfisher, and was bright with the scarlet glow of sunset clouds. All could see the wise emperor’s words, which shone like the rising sun. His charity was higher than the southern mountain: his kindness was deeper than the eastern sea.

道無不可。所可可名。聖無不作。所作可述

§15. A wise teaching always wins through, and what it achieves we are right to name. A wise ruler never rests, and what he achieves we are right to record.

肅宗文明[20]帝。於靈武等五郡。重立景寺。元善資而福祚開。大慶臨而皇業建。

13 Lo-yang. Reign of empress Wu (Chou dynasty), 690–705.
14 Literally ‘the inferior scholars’. A Taoist term of abuse for their opponents, here ironically turned against them.
17 Perhaps ‘Gabriel’.
§16. Suzong (Su-tsung) [756–62], the accomplished and prudent emperor, rebuilt the brilliant monasteries in Lingwu (Ling-wu) and four other departments.\textsuperscript{18} As he generously supported us, heaven supported him, and confirmed him in his imperial heritage.

§17. The accomplished and martial emperor Daizong (Tai-tsung) (r. 762–79) increased the empire’s power and conducted the affairs of the realm smoothly. Always on his birthday he offered incense to celebrate the empire’s good fortune, and gave a royal feast to honour the brilliant congregation.\textsuperscript{21} Heaven gives long life to the good: the good emperor gives long life to the empire.

§18. Today, in Jianzong (Chien-chung) (r. 780–3), our wise, divinely-favoured, accomplished and martial emperor strenuously pursues the eight great principles of government,\textsuperscript{19} degrading the undeserving and promoting the eminent. He thoroughly understands the nine categories of a ruler’s duty, and has an unerring instinct for the reforms which he promotes. We can pray for him without any reservation.

§19. Despite his elevated rank he remains humble. Despite the comfort of his position he is thoughtful and generous,\textsuperscript{22} helping all who are in misfortune, and making just provision for all his subjects. Such has been the influence of our teachings, awakening virtue in all who hear them. That the winds and rains come in their seasons; that the empire is at peace; that men cheerfully obey their ruler and all creatures seek to master their weaknesses; that the living can flourish and the dying can face death with confidence; that men speak and act with sincerity, without disguising their true feelings: all this is due to the beneficial influence of our ‘brilliant teaching’.

§20. We acknowledge our great patron\textsuperscript{23} the monk Yisi (I-ssu, i.e. Yazdbuzid) officer of the banqueting hall, deputy military governor of Shuo-fang, overseer of the examination hall, and companion of the order of the purple robe. Good-natured and virtuous, a zealous believer, he came from the royal city\textsuperscript{20} all the way to China (Chin. Zhongxia / Tsung-hsia).

\textsuperscript{18} Or ‘in Wu-chun’, the name of a town in the Ling-Wu district in modern Kansu province. Su-tsung marched through the Ling-Wu district during the campaign of 763 in which he recaptured Ch’ang-an from An Lu-shan’s rebel army. His army contained a large number of Uighur mercenaries, many of whom (at this period) were East Syrian Christians. Interestingly, many of these mercenaries are said to have converted to Manichaeanism shortly afterwards as the result of meeting Manichaean missionaries in the liberated capital.

\textsuperscript{20} Probably Merv or Balkh.
He was more knowledgeable than the doctors of the Three Dynasties, and his manners were polished in every respect.

§21. He first distinguished himself in the Red Hall, and his name was inscribed in the prince’s [24] tent. When Duke Guo Ziye (Kuo Tzu-i), secretary of state and prince of the Fanyang (Fan-yang) region, was first put in charge of military operations in Shuofang (Shuo-fang), Suzong (Su-tsun) ordered him to accompany the duke to his command. Though he enjoyed the privilege of access to the duke’s sleeping-tent, he made no distinction between himself and others on the march. He was teeth and nails to the duke, and ears and eyes to the army.

§22. He gave away all the gifts and rewards he received, scorning to lay up [25] treasure on earth. He gave us his retirement present of crystal glasses, and decorated our halls with carpets of golden weave. He restored the old monasteries and doubled the size of the churches. He raised and adorned the roofs of the galleries, so that they appeared like flying pheasants. He used his wealth to support the ‘brilliant teaching’. Every year he gathers the monks of the surrounding monasteries together, to hold services and make offerings for a period of fifty days. He invites the hungry to come, and he feeds them. He invites the cold to come, and he clothes them. He heals the sick, and [26] raises them up. He buries the dead, and lays them to rest. The Buddhists pride themselves on their purity, but their finest deeds cannot rival the merit of this white-robed priest of the ‘brilliant teaching’.

§23. We wish to engrave a praise poem to celebrate these wonderful events. The words are:

The true God is without origin, profound, unmoving, ever the same.
The universe is the work of his hands.
Through him the earth arose and heaven was framed.

One person of his Trinity appeared on earth.
Redemption and salvation knew no limit.
The sun rose and darkness [27] fled. All recognised a true mystery.

THE XI’AN MONUMENT

He was more knowledgeable than the doctors of the Three Dynasties, and his manners were polished in every respect.

§21. He first distinguished himself in the Red Hall, and his name was inscribed in the prince’s [24] tent. When Duke Guo Ziye (Kuo Tzu-i), secretary of state and prince of the Fanyang (Fan-yang) region, was first put in charge of military operations in Shuofang (Shuo-fang), Suzong (Su-tsun) ordered him to accompany the duke to his command. Though he enjoyed the privilege of access to the duke’s sleeping-tent, he made no distinction between himself and others on the march. He was teeth and nails to the duke, and ears and eyes to the army.

§22. He gave away all the gifts and rewards he received, scorning to lay up [25] treasure on earth. He gave us his retirement present of crystal glasses, and decorated our halls with carpets of golden weave. He restored the old monasteries and doubled the size of the churches. He raised and adorned the roofs of the galleries, so that they appeared like flying pheasants. He used his wealth to support the ‘brilliant teaching’. Every year he gathers the monks of the surrounding monasteries together, to hold services and make offerings for a period of fifty days. He invites the hungry to come, and he feeds them. He invites the cold to come, and he clothes them. He heals the sick, and [26] raises them up. He buries the dead, and lays them to rest. The Buddhists pride themselves on their purity, but their finest deeds cannot rival the merit of this white-robed priest of the ‘brilliant teaching’.

§23. We wish to engrave a praise poem to celebrate these wonderful events. The words are:

The true God is without origin, profound, unmoving, ever the same.
The universe is the work of his hands.
Through him the earth arose and heaven was framed.

One person of his Trinity appeared on earth.
Redemption and salvation knew no limit.
The sun rose and darkness [27] fled. All recognised a true mystery.

The true God is without origin, profound, unmoving, ever the same.
The universe is the work of his hands.
Through him the earth arose and heaven was framed.

One person of his Trinity appeared on earth.
Redemption and salvation knew no limit.
The sun rose and darkness [27] fled. All recognised a true mystery.
The accomplished emperor far excelled his predecessors. He crushed disorder beneath his feet. Heaven was widened and earth enlarged.

Our brilliant truth then came to T’ang (Tang). Scriptures were translated and monasteries built. Both living and dead made the voyage of salvation. Happiness sprang up everywhere, and all regions found peace.

Gaozong (Kao-tsun) honoured his ancestors, and rebuilt the pure mansions. Palaces of harmony shining far and wide filled all China (Chin. Zhongtu / Ts’ung-tu ). The path of truth was made known, the spiritual lord was appointed. Men knew joy and peace, and the land was free from pain and sorrow.

Xuanzong (Hsuan-tsun) ruled justly, and strove always to realise truth and virtue. He sent us a text in his own handwriting, which shone and dazzled. He sent us imperial portraits, which glittered like gems. The whole land revered him. His conduct was a shining example, and his justice was praised by all.

Suzong (Su-tsun) came to avenge him, riding a majestic chariot. He rose like the sun and rekindled the light. A kind wind swept away the darkness. Discontent was stilled and faction muzzled. China recovered its former glory.

Tai-tsung was pious and just, blessed with more than human wisdom. He was open-handed, and men enjoyed the fruits of his liberality. He regularly burned incense to heaven, and always looked kindly on men. From the rising sun to the setting moon crowds came to admire his might.

21 T’ai-tsung.
The present emperor (Jianzong / Ch’ien-chung) reigns widely and practises virtue. The four seas hold him in awe, and all lands benefit from his culture. No secrets are hidden from him, and he sees all the affairs of men. He enlightens the whole world; even the barbarians model themselves on him.

How profound is our faith, how widespread its influence! How difficult to find a name for our glorious Trinity! Our Lord is almighty: his servants must relate his acts. We therefore raise this great tablet to praise God who has so blessed us.

22Evidently the Chinese name of the East Syrian patriarch Hnanisho’ II (773–80). See the following sentence in Syriac.
23The Church of the East called its members ‘easterners’, distinguishing them from the ‘western’ Christians of the Roman empire. The ‘brilliant congregations of the East’ refers not only to the East Syrian communities in China itself but also to Church of the East generally, which at this period had over a hundred dioceses in Egypt, Arabia, Palestine, Syria, Iraq, Iran, Central Asia, India, China, and Tibet.
24B’yawmi aba d’abahatha Mar Hnanisho’ qatoliqa patrirqis. A standard East Syrian dating formula with numerous parallels in other Syriac documents, naming the reigning patriarch. In fact the patriarch Hnanisho’ II (776–80) died early in 780, and his successor Timothy I (780–823), according to the Chronography of Eliya of Nisibis, was consecrated in Baghdad on Sunday 7 May 780. The East Syrian Church in China was evidently still unaware of these events in February 781. The name Hnanisho’ means ‘Grace of Jesus’.

Until recently the East and West Syrian churches have normally used a dating system counting from 311 BC, the date of the founding of the Greek Seleucid kingdom in the Middle East by one of the generals of Alexander the Great. This system is variously known as the ‘Seleucid era’, the ‘era of the Greeks’, or the ‘era of Alexander’.

[57] Mar Sargis qshisha w’kurapisqupa Shiangtsoa. The word Shiangtsoa has not been satisfactorily explained. It seems to be a transliteration of two Chinese characters, the first of which is almost certainly shang, ‘upper’. It perhaps signifies shangchu, ‘the upper region’, possibly the region between Tun-huang and Ch’ang-an.

[58] The Syriac form of the biblical name Paul.

後一千七十九年成豐己未武林韓泰華來觀字畫完整重造碑亭覆焉惜故友吳子苾方伯不及同遊也為悵然久之

One thousand and seventy-nine years later, in Jiwei (chi-wei) of Xianfeng (Hsien-feng) (1859 CE), Han Taihua (Han T'ai-hua) of Wulin (Wu-lin, i.e. Hang-chou) came to see. Fortunately the characters were perfect and complete. He rebuilt the pavilion of the monument to protect it. Sadly, his old friend the Treasurer Wu Zibi (Wu Tzu-pi) did not come with him. Long will he regret it.\textsuperscript{66}
