1. MQACRC RESEARCH PROGRAM OCTOBER 2010 – OCTOBER 2011

The MQACRC's overall theme of examining cross-cultural interaction via close analysis of texts and artefacts is advanced through three research programs: CULTURAL IDENTITY, CULTURAL CONTACT, and ACCULTURATION (see www.acrc.mq.edu.au/research.html). These act as collaborative foci for the individual projects that sit within them (titles in italics below), to facilitate collaborative work and the drawing of comparative conclusions. Projects within these research programs represent the key focus areas of the Centre: Egypt (from the Predynastic to Coptic periods); the Greco-Roman world (from Classical to Late Antiquity); and China and the Silk Road (full titles, descriptions, and researcher details for selected projects may be found in Appendix 2).

CULTURAL IDENTITY analyses the construction of cultural identity in ancient societies through the study of art, language and communication, and belief systems. Within this program, Dzino worked on his ARC APD project Ancient and Medieval Identity-shifts (App. 2.3) at sites, libraries, and museums in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Romania. Traviglia conducted research at Italian universities and archives for the projects Beyond the city wall and In paludibus moenia constituta (App. 2.16-17). Chan presented papers at peak international conferences in Paris and Honolulu arising from her project Early Chinese Thought in the Newly Discovered Ancient Bamboo Manuscripts. L. Evans completed her study of Ancient Egyptians' Atypical Relationship with Invertebrates, preparing a volume on the findings, and began work on her ARC APD project An Environmental History of Ancient Meir (App. 2.4-5). T. Evans undertook research at the University of Oxford and the Catholic University of Leuven, Belgium for the monograph The Language of the Individual in the Zenon Archive (App. 2.7). Nobbs and Choat continued work on the project Papyri from the Rise of Christianity in Egypt, due to be completed in 2012, while Hilliard and Beness had two articles arising from the Dictionary of Roman Biography project accepted for publication during 2011.

CULTURAL CONTACT analyses the character and impact of cultural contact in ancient societies, examining specific points and features of contact between the Centre's key focus areas. Lieu and Mikkelsen made significant advances on their ARC funded project China and the Ancient Mediterranean World (www.acrc.mq.edu.au/serica), with one volume of texts and translations published and a second volume of commentary in the final stages of preparation. Archival work at the Argenti Library on Chios enabled Lieu to prepare a second draft of a monograph on the project Gallipoli before Gallipoli (www.acrc.mq.edu.au/gallipoli) (App. 2.12-13). McKechnie brought together international experts for a conference to examine the topic Ptolemy I Soter: Egypt in a Phase of Change (see 6[d]), with a refereed volume to arise from this. Gillett had three book chapters in international collaborative projects accepted for the project Communication and Media in the Development of the Post-Roman/Early Medieval and Byzantine World (former ARC funding), on which he worked while on research travel to Paris/Metz and Yale, while Mikkelsen worked in London, Cambridge, and Aarhus on his MQNS-funded project Manichaeae hymns and prayers in Chinese translation.

ACCULTURATION analyses processes of acculturation in ancient societies through the study of art, language and communication, and belief systems. Within this program Choat worked in Egypt and at Macquarie (during a visit by PI Heike Behlmer, Göttingen, Germany) on their ARC-funded project Communication Networks in Upper Egyptian Monastic Communities (App. 2.2). At conferences in Vienna and Cordoba (Spain), in November-December 2011, Choat delivered major invited papers summarising final results of the ARC-funded Religious Authority and Linguistic Change in Late Antique Egypt (App. 2.1), and began work during the second half of 2011 on the MQRDG-funded Scribal Practice in Duplicate Documents on Papyrus from Graeco-Roman Egypt. T. Evans led work on the ARC-funded Words from the Sand (App. 2.6), drafting entries and conducting research training HDR and undergraduates Research Assistants.

Archeological fieldwork forms a major component of the MQACRC research program, with MQACRC teams working at sites in Egypt, Italy, and Greece in late 2010 and 2011. In Egypt, teams worked at 6 sites: the 2011 season at Meir was interrupted by the unrest in Egypt in late January: before this time Kanawati and Woods recorded and studied of the tomb of Pepyankh-heryib, and begin work on the tomb of Wekh-hotep for their MQSN-funded project Between two peaks (App. 2.10). In June–July 2011 Kanawati worked at Beni Hassan on the tomb of Khnum-hotep II for the MQRDG-funded Civil War and its Aftermath (App. 2.22). Ockinga and Binder conducted fieldwork in Thebes December 2010-January 2011 on the Tomb of Saroy (TT233), with preliminary work starting on the tomb of Amenmose (TT149); during December 2010, Choat worked on site on Coptic texts from TT233 (App. 2.14, see also 2.2). In November–December 2010 Tristant worked on the Macquarie-University of Vienna joint excavation at Helwan (App. 2.21), and in the Wadi Araba (App. 2.20), where a total of 104 new sites and archaeological features were recorded. As the situation in Egypt did not allow the planned season at Abu Rawash, Tristant studied material from the site at Strasbourg University (France) in January 2011 (App. 2.19). In December 2010, Parry and Choat carried out their second survey season on an unrecorded monastic settlement at El-Hagarsa in Sohag (App. 2.15). Ghica continued research on monastic sites he is excavating in the Bahriyya and Farafra Oases in preparation for an MQNS / IFAO-funded field season in early 2012, and worked in France with G. Roquet on the publication of Greek and Coptic inscriptions from Bagawat in the Khageh oasis. In Greece, Beness, Hillard, Traviglia, Gore worked with Domestic and International colleagues on a 2012 ARC DP application to recommence work at Torone (App. 2.9), on which Hillard delivered the Australian Archaeological Institute’s Annual Lecture in Athens. In Italy, Traviglia conducted fieldwork for her MQRF project Beyond the City Wall in Aquileia in October–November 2010 (App. 2.16), and worked with K. van Dyke and J. Mckenzie-Clark (Museum of Ancient Cultures) in October 2011 at Carsulae (Terni) on the Australian Carsulae Archaeological Project (App. 2.18).

The close study of physical artefacts from antiquity is a particular research focus of the MQACRC. During 2011, Parry worked on manuscripts at the John Rylands University Library of Manchester and conducted research on a silk fragment at the National Museum of Korea, Seoul. Ghica worked on an edition of literary and documentary Coptic texts in the Schøyen collection (Oslo), and Choat (working with I. Gardner, University of Sydney) submitted for publication a monograph-length edition of a major Coptic magical text in the collection of the MQ Museum of Ancient Cultures, the first volume in a major new undertaking to publish the papyri in the Museum of Ancient Cultures (see www.acrc.mq.edu.au/papyri). Cromwell worked on Coptic papyri and ostraca at the Carlsberg Institute (University of Copenhagen) and in London (British Library and British Museum). As well as traditional study of artifacts, MQACRC teams have been progressively applying innovative analytical techniques to derive historical conclusions from the composition of ancient artifacts: on this front, Gore and Sheedy visited the numismatic collection in the Münzkabinett der Staatlichen Museen Berlin, to continue their work in Attic coins as part of their MQSN-funded project Funding Tyranny, and Gore and van Dyke continued their work on authentication of Roman glassware with a range of researchers from domestic institutions and industry partners (App. 2.8).

The MQACRC has made significant infrastructure developments in 2011: Successful MQSIS RIBG and Faculty Research Infrastructure applications (7b) permitted the establishment of the MQ Archaeological Fieldwork laboratory, which sits within the Centre, and houses a suite of Archaeological surveying equipment which will augment the progress of current fieldwork projects and assist in attracting future funding. MQSIS funding also allowed for a full digitization and database of the papyri in the Museum of Ancient Cultures, which will be put online with Australian National Data Service funding (7a). T. Evans acquired the surviving archives of G. W. H. Lampe’s Patristic Greek Lexicon project from Oxford University Press and the Bodleian Library, Oxford, which will be important for future lexical research.

2012 PROPOSED ACTIVITIES (KPIS 1–3): During 2012, MQACRC members will continue to advance their research projects, which will be augmented by new projects for which funding was won during 2011 (see below, 7(a)-(b)). 11 archaeological missions are planned during late 2011 and 2012 in Egypt and Italy, as well as research trips to Northern Hemisphere libraries, archives, and museums. Centre members will present their research at major international fora, with a strong presence at key peak meetings such as those of the Society of Biblical Literature (San Francisco, USA, Nov. 2011) and International Association for Coptic Studies (Rome, Sept. 2012) (KPI 2b, 3d). Members will continue to publish the results of these projects in high ERA ranking outlets, thus maintaining research active status and contributing to a successful MQ ERA performance (KPI 1, 2c).

International research colleagues who have confirmed they will visit Macquarie in late 2011 and 2012 include: Professor Nicholas Sims-Williams (former Professor of Iranian and Central Asian Studies, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London); Professor Heike Behlmer (Egyptology and Coptology, University of Göttingen); Dr Konstantinos Politis (Director of the Hellenic Society for Near Eastern Studies in Greece), and well as two Gale Fellows in Egyptology, and the Sir Asher Joel Fellow for 2012 (yet to be appointed)

The following colloquia and conferences will be held under the auspices of the MQACRC (KPI 3e):

Dzino, ‘Negotiating the Local and Global: Religion in ancient and early medieval Dalmatia’ (ARC Future Fellowship).

Hillard, Beness, Gore, and Traviglia, ‘Ancient landscape transformation in northern Greece: natural processes and anthropogenic factors’ (ARC DP).

Four potential applicants for ARC DECRA funding have also approached Centre members for sponsorship in this scheme in 2012.

Those applications listed below at 7(d) which are unsuccessful in the 2011 ARC round will also be resubmitted. MQACRC members will continue to work during 2012 on attracting income streams outside of external competitive funding bodies to support the operations and research of the Centre. These include the establishment of a new Society to support Coptic Studies, and the Ancient Mediterranean Studies Foundation, which will initially focus on the support of research into the history and archaeology of ancient Israel.

6. Marketing of MQACRC Activities and Public Impact

- a. Increase media coverage of MQACRC projects

4. FINANCIAL SUMMARY AND BUDGET FORECAST

(a) Financial Summary 2011

(i) Operating Funding

The $50,000 in Operating funding granted to the MQACRC under the MQRC scheme for 2011 has been committed and expended as follows. A University generated financial statement system is attached as Appendix 3: however, it should be noted there that the commitment for the salary of Hreszczuk has been incorrectly represented to a substantial degree (it should be $6162.16, not $18860.48, which has caused the account to show as ‘overdrawn’, when it is not), and the General expenses section of the table has become confused: the version below corrects these errors, and rationalises the ‘General expenses’ section, including some commitments which are not recorded in the financial statement.

As can be seen from the table below (and noting the points made in the notes below), the outstanding funds in the MQACRC account have been committed, and will be expended before the end of 2011.

Personnel	Committed	Payments	Outstanding Commitments

Total	49483.42	27690.74	21792.68

Current Account Balance: $22,309.26

Notes:

1. As MQACRC grant-writing was coordinated by a Centre member with a full time position in 2011, it was not necessary to commit the funds which had been budgeted in the 2011 budget for this purpose, and these funds will instead be directed to essential infrastructure support, in the form of digitisation of centre research resources, in October – December.
2. Faculty of Arts web-notes are due to be ‘frozen’ for part of November-December for transfer to a new Content management system, so the full amount of funds committed for web-site work cannot be spent before the end of the year. A portion of the funding committed will be redeployed to support the Centre Administrative work being undertaken by A. Mourad for the remainder of 2011.

3. $3,000 was budgeted in 2011 for funding the travel of an international keynote speaker to a conference at Macquarie, but as McKechnie, the convener of the MQACRC conference 'Ptolemy I Soter and the Transformation of Egypt', successfully applied for external funding to support the travel of international speakers, this funding will be redeployed to support the Centre Administrative work being undertaken by A. Mourad for the remainder of 2011.
4. This account was paid on 28/8/11, but the Financial Statement has not registered this properly, and it seems the balance remains to be paid.
5. The appointment of the Digitisation assistant (see note 1) and the amendments to Mourad's appointment are in progress and have not yet been registered on the Financial Statement. They are included in the table above to provide an accurate picture of how the Centre intends to expend its MQRC funding in the remainder of 2011.

Justification for Operating Funding Budget

Grant Writing Assistance: The MQACRC found during 2010 that dedicating funds to administrative assistance for external and internal grant applications increased success rates notably, and plan to dedicate funds to this in 2012 to support the full-time academic staff member who had been undertaking this role in 2011.

Preparation for Centre of Excellence bid:

Personnel:

Preparation for a bid for Centre of Excellence Status will involve substantial liaison with similar Research Centres in Australia and the Macquarie University Research office, investigation of similar Research Centres overseas, and collection of detailed data on the activities of MQACRC members. A member of the MQACRC Executive will lead this, and it is proposed to appoint an administrative assistant to support this work.

Travel:

1. It is proposed that a MQACRC representative travel to Perth during 2012 to consult with the leaders of the ARC Centre of Excellence in the History of Emotions, a recently funded Humanities ARC CoE, to gain insights into and future assistance with the application process.
2. It is proposed to bring strategic partners and potential Centre of Excellent co-applicants from the Department of Classics and Ancient History, University of Auckland (Professor Tony Spalinger); Centre for Archaeology & Ancient History, Monash University (Dr Colin Hope); and Centre for Early Christian Studies, Australian Catholic University, Brisbane (Professor Pauline Allen; Dr Bronwyn Neill) to Macquarie during 2012, to hold strategic meetings on the CoE proposal and deliver research seminars. This will further the research and strategic collaboration between Macquarie and these institutions, and lay the groundwork for an ARC CoE application.

Desktop Publication Assistance: Several monograph series, which constitute an important part of the MQACRC research output, are prepared as high-quality pdf files (the equivalent of camera-ready copy) in-house. Specialized assistance is required with Desktop publication software, e.g. InDesign, as well as with image manipulation, and liaising with publishers on technical aspects of publication.

Public Impact, Communication, and Outreach: The MQACRC places great importance on outreach to the general public, internal student body, and potential HDR students, postdoctoral fellows, and research collaborators. Funding is therefore allocated for two items to better enable this:

Web Assistant: The ACRC website is the public face of the Centre and requires maintenance and updating on a regular basis.

Glass Display Case: For the display of recent publications by MQACRC members, and to advertise forthcoming events; to be installed on the third floor of W6A.

Centre Administration: An Administrative Assistant working under the Centre Director is responsible for MQACRC correspondence, the maintenance of files and databases, assistance with the collation of annual reports, assistance with the organization of MQACRC conferences, and such other administrative tasks as arise in the course of running a Research Centre.

Conference Funding: The MQACRC is committed to staging international conferences at Macquarie (as stated in Centre KPIs) to aid in research collaboration and the diffusion of MQACRC research. The budgeted amount is for seed funding, to be put towards the substantial costs of venue hire, catering, and publicity. Conference organisers are expected to source funding for bringing major international speaker to such conferences from external sources.

Subscriptions and Resources: Membership of Australian Consortium of Humanities Research Centres Membership, of which the MQACRC is a foundational member, ensures the maintenance of research synergy with other Humanities Research Centres in Australia. The Brussels Papyrological Bibliography is an important database tool used by many projects within the Centre, the use of which is essential for international quality work in papyrology and related fields.

(ii) Research Funding

To be expended on project costs during 2012 according to the budgets of the individual projects. (Currently held grants – to be augmented by any funding received in late 2011).

5.3 Advisory Board Activities

The Advisory Board met on 12th August 2011, presided over by Em. Prof. Bob Milns. During this meeting, decisions taken by the Executive over the previous 12 months were reviewed and approved. Progress of research and successful funding applications was noted; a proposed budget for 2012 was discussed and approved; and centre research plans for 2012 were discussed and an overarching research plan for 2012 approved. The proposed ARC Centre of Excellence was discussed, and the Advisory Board gave their approval to the current plans and direction. The External Advisors offered their expert opinions on the prospect of field work in Egypt in the immediate future, advising MQACRC teams to recommence work there as soon as was practicable, as this was important in terms of maintaining relations with colleagues in Egypt and the Supreme Council of Antiquities. It was noted that many foreign missions had already returned to work there.

Emeritus Professor Max Coltheart, who had served as Deputy Chair, stepped down from this position in 2011. The Executive subsequently resolved to invite Professor Iain Gardner (Dept. of Studies in Religion, University of Sydney; FAHA) to serve in this position.

9. EFFECTIVENESS OF THE CENTRE ON PROMOTING COLLABORATIVE RESEARCH

The MQACRC has been highly effective in enabling and promoting collaborative research within the area of Ancient world studies during the first three years of its operation, including cross-disciplinary research. This has occurred in several ways.

- Increasing collaboration between specialists in the various sub-fields within Ancient History:
  - Ockinga and Binder (Egyptology) collaborated with Choat and Behlmer (Coptic Studies) on diachronic analysis of sites in Western Thebes, charting patterns in changing use of sacred space from Pharaonic tomb to Coptic monastery, and taking account of textual material from Dynastic period hieroglyphic inscriptions to Coptic papyri.
  - In like manner Parry (Art History), Choat and Ghica (Coptic texts) and Tristant (Archaeology) are collaborating on diachronic study of Egyptian sites.
- Increasing collaboration with overseas partners. Among the projects beginning since the establishment of the Centre:
  - T. Evans and J. Lee (Senior Research Fellow, Ancient History) have an ARC DP funded project in collaboration with James Aitken, University of Cambridge.
  - Kanawati, Evans and Woods, have an ARC DP funded project in collaboration with Gay Robins (Emory University, Atlanta).
  - Lieu and Mikkelsen have an ARC DP funded project in collaboration with, J. Markley (South California State University Fullerton), G. Greatrex (Univ. of Ottawa), N. Sims-Williams (School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London), T. Loden (University of Stockholm, Sweden), bringing together experts on Ancient Rome, Central Asia, and China.
  - Traviglia's MQRF-funded project on Aquileia is carried out in close cooperation with Italian colleagues.
  - Dzino's ARC-APD project on Identity in Post-Yugoslav Space is proceeding in collaboration with colleagues in Croatia.
  - Tristant and Ghica are undertaking fieldwork at three sites in Egypt in collaboration with colleagues from the Institut français d'archéologie orientale, Cairo.
- Increasing cross-disciplinary collaboration:
  - Gore (Environment and Geography) is undertaking collaborative research with fellow centre-members from Ancient History on the composition of ancient artefacts (e.g. with Sheedy, on coins; with Van Dyke (Museum of Ancient Cultures) on glassware); and on ancient landscape and topography (with Hillard, Beness and Traviglia on the site of Torone, Greece).
- Increasing participation in International peak disciplinary bodies:
  - During 2011 Traviglia was associated as a partner of the European 'ArchaeoLandscapes Europe' (ArcLand) network (EC funded project whose goal is to explore how aerial imagery and remote sensing is being used by archaeologists to understand our past); elected as a member of the the 'Commission 4' of UISPP (International Union for Prehistoric and Protohistoric Sciences, UNESCO) as Representative Member of the Commission for Australia; and elected Vice-president of the newly established UISPP (International Union for Prehistoric and Protohistoric Sciences, UNESCO) Commission for 'Archaeological prospections' (sole representative member of the Commission for Australia).

APPENDIX 1: THIRD YEAR REVIEW RESPONSE

As part of the 3-year review process, the MQACRC has been asked to address the three issues below, which we do in the following appendix.

1. How the Centre's functions and goals continue to be relevant, effective and efficient, and why the Centre should continue;
2. The strategic and operational planning in place for the ensuing period, including succession planning; and
3. That academic and financial support for the Centre remains sufficiently strong to justify the Centre's continuation.

1. CENTRE FUNCTIONS AND GOALS

The Centre undertakes collaborative research on cross-cultural interaction in ancient cultures from Western Europe to China, concentrating not only on the history of the societies concerned, but on the languages they used, with a special focus on the close study of physical artefacts from antiquity. Beyond the publication of high quality research outputs, winning of external project funding, development of external and international linkages, and HDR recruitment and training, the MQACRC considers outreach to be a primary activity, advanced through community networks already developed by members of the proposed Centre as well as in new areas, to promote Ancient Cultures and partner researchers at Macquarie, as well as the University itself, in local and international forums.

These goals remain relevant to Macquarie's strategic focus, contributing to a successful performance in the ERA 2010 exercise in the areas covered by the MQACRC: Centre members played an important role in gaining the highest score in the ERA 2010 exercise for any Field of Research in the Faculty of Arts, '4 – above world standard' for FoRC 21 (History and Archaeology); FoRC 22 (Philosophy and Religion), to which MQACRC members also contributed, was rated as '3 – at world standard'. It is anticipated that MQACRC members will again play a key role in ERA 2012, in which research outputs of Centre members will be concentrated in FoRC 21 to maximize performance.

The MQACRC is thus maintaining research synergy with University and Faculty strategic goals. At a national level, during 2011 the MQACRC became a foundation member of the Australian Consortium of Humanities Research Centres, a network for groups engaged in Humanities-based research, ensuring the maintenance of research synergy with other Humanities Research Centres in Australia.

This external measure of performance and the MQACRC track record of exceeding its KPIs in terms of research output, funding, and collaboration indicate the effectiveness of the program set out in the Application for MQRC status and followed during the first three years of the Centre's operations. The MQACRC has put in place an efficient management structure which incorporates mentoring of junior staff and an effective framework for collaborative research enterprises.

In outreach terms, the MQACRC and its members have continued to build links with private donors and community groups that both publicise Centre research beyond the academy and attract funding to support the operations and research of the Centre. Existing support societies within the university have been maintained, and new ones instituted (see below, under point 3). The healthy state of this community outreach underlines the relevance of the MQACRC's research program outside the academy, to which attendances at public events, media coverage of research, and donations to support Centre activities attest.

On this basis, we believe that Centre's functions and goals continue to be relevant, effective and efficient; and that the Centre should thus continue.

2. STRATEGIC AND OPERATIONAL PLANNING

The Centre's key Strategic plan is to maintain and increase research momentum (including funding, membership, and outputs) towards an ARC Centre of Excellence application at the next opportunity. This will be accomplished by adherence to the KPIs the Centre has established, and by increased attention in years 4-5 of the Centre's initial operation to the formation of strategic research partnerships with a view to these partners cooperating in an ARC CoE application.

As the Centre goes forward, we seek to develop infrastructure and operational capability in key areas of research strength. To augment Egyptology and Archaeology, and in collaboration with Centre members and other colleagues in the Faculty of Science, MQACRC members have successfully sought funding for equipment with which to better survey, record, and analyse ancient sites and objects of material culture. A major strategic goal is to build the resources of the MQ Archaeological Fieldwork laboratory within the Centre into a world-class suite of archaeological equipment which will allow innovative project design and thus help attract further collaborators and funding.

In terms of Operational planning, the most important issue is succession planning, with regard both to the Executive and the centre membership in general. The MQACRC Executive is led by the Director and Deputy Directors, who are all of professorial rank (Kanawati, Nobbs, Lieu). Of the remaining members of the Executive, three are Associate Professors (Gillett Ockinga; from 2012, McKechnie), and four are Senior Lecturers or equivalent (Choat, L. Evans, T. Evans, Sheedy). MQACRC KPIs require the current Director and Deputy Directors to mentor their colleagues on the Executive. Via the succession plans detailed in the next paragraph, the MQACRC aims not only to ensure a smooth transition to the next generation of leadership who have been prepared via mentoring to lead the Centre, but to identify and develop the governance structure for the proposed ARC Centre of Excellence.

During the last two years of the initial 5-year period of the Centre's operations, it is proposed that the current Director and Deputy Directors remain in their posts. During this time, they will mentor the Associate Professors on the Executive Committee, with the intention that the Director and Deputy Director will be selected from among them when the incumbents step down from their positions. The members of the committee at Senior Lecturer rank will in the meantime be mentored to assume leadership positions on the Executive in the future; the Executive resolved in 2011 to appoint one of these as Secretary to the Executive Committee to assist in and formalise the mentoring process. The executive will meanwhile identify leadership talent among Centre members who may be inducted onto the committee to maintain its numbers when current members of the Executive step down from the Committee. In terms of wider membership, the Executive will continue to seek potential Centre members who fulfill the KPIs for Centre membership to join the Centre.

3. ACADEMIC AND FINANCIAL SUPPORT FOR THE CENTRE

Academic support of the MQACRC within the Faculty of Arts remains strong, with the Centre and its members playing an important role in attracting ongoing research funding and contributing strongly to the research output of the Faculty, including a strong performance in ERA 2010 (See above, under Point 1).

Financial Support

The key strategic goal of the MQACRC in securing its ongoing financial position is a bid for ARC Centre of Excellence status at the next opportunity, which is regarded by the Executive committee as an important and necessary step in the life of the Centre. During the years 4 and 5 of the Centre's initial 5-year term of operation, a dedicated administrative assistant will work with members of the Centre executive to prepare for this application.

MQACRC members have an excellent record of attracting external funding for research projects, and this success can be forecast to continue, augmented by the mentoring of junior members, careful planning of research projects, increased international collaboration, and further collaborative enterprises within the MQACRC that the Centre itself makes possible.

In terms of Operational Funding, the MQACRC plans in the first instance to become a Centre of Excellence, which would provide operational (as well as substantial research) funding for the Centre. In addition to this (and as a fallback position) the Centre plans to undertake the following activities in the coming years to raise Operational funds to support the activities of the Centre.

1. Work through affiliates (Society for the Study of Early Christianity; Rundle Foundation for Egyptian Archaeology; Macquarie Ancient History Association) organise Outreach activities such as HSC Study Days
2. Increased marketing of Continuing Education courses offered by Centre Members.
3. Organise study tours for the general public to ancient sites and museums: several Centre members have experience with running such events.
4. Seek private donors willing to support Centre activities.

With regard to the last point, Centre members have worked during 2011 to initiate two bodies to aid in fundraising: an Ancient Mediterranean Studies Foundation will be launched in 2012, and a Society for Coptic Studies was launched on 26/10/11. These bodies will work to raise funds which will support ACRC activities. Existing bodies the Society for the Study of Early Christianity, the Rundle Foundation for Egyptian Archaeology, and the Macquarie Ancient History Association, will also continue to provide support in this regard.

APPENDIX 2: FURTHER DETAIL ON SELECTED PROJECTS AND RESEARCH TEAMS REFERRED TO IN THIS REPORT
(Alphabetically according to lead researcher)

1. Religious authority and linguistic change in late antique Egypt: non-elite perspectives on the rise of monasticism in contemporary documents

Researcher: M. Choat

Funding: ARC DP (2006–2008)

The funding period for this project finished (after carry-over approved by the ARC) at the end of 2010, and final results have been written up during 2011. The project carried out a complete new examination two source bodies: the early (4th - 5th century CE) papyrological evidence for monasticism in Egypt; and early Coptic documentary papyri; both resulted in significant discoveries. On the monastic side, there were two major goals: the first was a re-edition of the most important archive for 4th century monastic papyri, the bilingual archive of Apa Johannes. New texts not previously associated with the archive have been discovered, and an overview was set forth in a published conference paper. The volume is now in an advanced stage of drafting, and will be submitted to a publisher in 2012. The second major goal outlined in the application was a collection of the early documentation for monasticism: after initial discussions with Professor Claudia Rapp (University of Vienna), it was decided to collaboratively edit a volume of translated monastic papyri: this is now under contract to Cambridge University Press as Early Monasticism: Documents and Texts from Late Antique Egypt, and is also due to be delivered in 2012.

The close study of early Coptic documentary papyri outlined in the application has produced a major new treatment of early Coptic letters. The formulaic structure of Coptic epistolography has been clarified, and its relationship to Greek and Demotic letters made clear. The two streams of the project were woven together in two invited presentations to conferences in Vienna and Cordoba in November and December 2010. The project has thus had significant outcomes: in its close examination of the papyrological documentation, particularly that in Coptic, it has provided new insights into the relationship between Christian monasticism and surrounding society in late antique Egypt, and illuminated the milieu of the earliest expressions of written Coptic in late antique Egypt.

2. Communication networks in Upper Egyptian monastic communities in the 6th to 8th centuries CE

Researchers: M. Choat; H. Behlmer (University of Göttingen)

Funding: ARC DP (2008–2010)

In December 2010 Choat worked in Luxor on the texts from TT233, identifying rare names among the papyrus letters that will allow this monastic cell to be better placed within the network formed by the Deir el-Bakhit and other monastic settlements on the Dra Abu'l Naga. Behlmer and RA Underwood continued work on the Coptic ostraca from TT 84 and 95: 623 texts from the two tombs have now been transcribed, photographed, and recorded in a Database. Notable finds were an extract from the Life of Pachomius, and some letters that might be ascribed to the well-known local monk Frange. Work on the ostraca, papyri, and graffiti from these tombs is allowing the first reconstructions of these previously unknown monastic communities. During 2011 PhD student Burchfield also continued work on his thesis project charting the networks centred on the Monastery of Epiphanius: he completed an initial survey of the published material, and presenting a conference paper at the Australasian Society for Classical Studies annual meeting (University of Auckland, January 2011) in which he outlined the application of Network Theory to the material.

3. Ancient and Medieval Identity-shifts and the Construction of Identities in Post-Yugoslav Space

Researcher: D. Dzino

Funding: ARC APD (2010–2014)

Dzino conducted research on this project during a five-month research trip, visiting sites, libraries and museums in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Romania. During this time he co-convened (together with Prof. Mladen Ančić) a MA level unit ‘The question of Croatian migration’ at the Faculty of Croatian Studies, University of Zagreb. His book Becoming Slav, Becoming Croat: Identity transformations in post-Roman Dalmatia, was launched on 9th of April in Parliament of NSW.

4. An Environmental History of Ancient Meir

Researcher: L. Evans

Funding: ARC APD (2011–2014)

Building upon previous studies of the animals represented in Egyptian art, Evans is undertaking a major analysis of the depicted flora and fauna from Old, Intermediate, and Middle Kingdom tombs at the ancient Egyptian cemetery at Meir. In conjunction with an extensive evaluation of inscriptional data (especially biographical texts), the study will seek evidence of environmental change at the site, and assess its potential effects on both the people and the land.

5. The Invertebrates of Ancient Egypt

Researcher: L. Evans

Funding: MQRF (2008–2010)

This three-year study to document and analyse the depiction of invertebrates (insects, arachnids, and molluscs) in Egyptian art (wall scenes, jewellery, amulets, etc) was completed during 2011. The aim of the project was to provide the first detailed record of this neglected, yet pervasive, class of animals in Egyptian cultural remains dating from the predynastic to the New Kingdom period, identify the species represented, and shed light on the Egyptian people's uniquely positive response to invertebrates. A volume summarising the findings is now in preparation.

6. Words from the Sand: A Lexical Analysis of Early Greek Papyri from Egypt

Researchers: T. Evans; J. Lee (Senior Research fellow, Dept. of Ancient History); J. Aitken (University of Cambridge).

Funding: ARC DP (2010–2014).

This major project, which aims to produce a state of the art lexical analysis of early Greek papyri, offering a key contribution to the larger study of the ancient Greek language and lexicon, continues to develop according to plan. The current focus is on drafting of entries and on training of a team of research assistants (two Higher Degree Research students, three undergraduates)

7. Idiolect and Social Dialect in the Zenon Archive

Researchers: Trevor Evans; John Lee

Funding: ARC DP (2004–06).

Research for the monograph The Language of the Individual in the Zenon Archive has reached an advanced stage of development, building on earlier Australian Research Council funding. In April 2011 Evans made a short research trip to the University of Oxford, UK (17–18 April) and the Catholic University of Leuven, Belgium (18–21 April), consulting with several international colleagues in both centres, and working on specific chapters of the monograph The Language of the Individual in the Zenon Archive (in preparation), especially intensive palaeographic analysis in consultation with world-expert Prof. Willy Clarysse of Leuven.

8. Composition of authentic and non-authentic Roman glassware

Researchers: D. Gore; Karl Van Dyke (Museum of Ancient Cultures), Anne Rich (UNSW); Christopher Marjo (UNSW); Gary Pritchard (PANalytical).

Gore and Van Dyke continued their work on authentication of Roman glassware during 2011, with a range of researchers including collaborators from UNSW, and industry partners from the company PANalytical.

9. The Torone Project

Researchers: T. Hillard, L. Beness, A. Traviglia, D. Gore

In May, Hillard was invited to deliver the Australian Archaeological Institute's Annual Lecture in Athens on this project, which investigates Torone (modern Tironi), an ancient trading centre in northern Greece. Beness and Hillard collaborated in the drafting of an ARC application with Traviglia, Gore and colleagues at the University of Sydney and Norwich University, Vermont, for submission in 2012 to recommence work at the site. The final archaeological reports on an underwater survey were published in Mediterranean Archaeology.

10. Between two peaks: Tracing Egypt's cultural transition from the Old Kingdom to the Middle Kingdom at Meir.

Researchers: N. Kanawati; L. Evans; A. Woods,

Funding: MQSN (2011)

The fieldwork season at Meir was planned to take place during January-February, 2011, but due to the unrest in Egypt the team had to leave the country at the end of January. Fortunately however, the recording and studying of the important tomb D2 of Pepyankh-heryib was completed and a monograph on this work is now being prepared. The work on tomb B2 of Wekh-hotep, son of Senbi was started and will be completed in January, 2012.

11. Corpus Fontium Manichaeorum

Researchers: S. Lieu and international colleagues

The project published its twelfth volume in early 2011 (with back-dated 2010 d.o.p.). Work is nearing completion on Vol. 13 which is based on the important work done by the Australian team at the site of Quanzhou (Zayton) in China. The next few volumes are going to be more time-consuming to produce as there is no electronic version of the Greek texts of anti-Manichaean writings like those of Serapion of Thmuis and Titus of Bostra. So they have to be data-entered ab initio. Similarly the Chinese texts held on the Database of Manichaean Texts have now been superseded by the advent of Unicode and will have to be completely re-entered, thus causing serious delays to the text-volumes of Series Sinica.

12. China and the Ancient Mediterranean World

Researchers: S. Lieu, G. Mikkelsen, J. Markley (South California State University Fullerton), G.

Greatrex (Univ. of Ottawa), N. Sims-Williams (School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London), T. Loden (University of Stockholm, Sweden)

Funding: ARC DP (2010-14)

The first volume of texts and translations of Greek and Latin Authors on the Far East was published in early 2011 (with back-dated 2010 d.o.p.). A second volume containing a commentary on these texts is at the final stages of preparation. The project has also published extensively online at its website, www.acrc.mq.edu.au/serica/.

13. Gallipoli Before Gallipoli

Researcher: S. Lieu

Lieu is in the process of writing the second draft of the proposed monograph which should appear in good time for the centenary celebrations in April, 2015. He found a great deal of interesting medieval material on the Dardanelles at the Argenti Library on the Greek island of Chios in July, 2011. During 2011 the project placed a substantial amount of research findings online at its website, www.acrc.mq.edu.au/gallipoli/.

14. Macquarie Theban Tombs Project

Researchers: B. Ockinga; S. Binder

The project conducted field work in Luxor in Egypt from 1 December 2010 to 10 January 2011. This season's fieldwork consisted of the epigraphic recording of the Tomb of Saroy (TT233) and preliminary work on a new tomb, the adjacent tomb of Amenmose (TT149).

In TT233, a collation of the facsimile drawings that were done of the reliefs and inscriptions in TT233 was made, the drawings of the wall fragments in TT233 that had been made in previous seasons were collated, and those decorated fragments that have not yet been done were traced. A database of 190 individual blocks and fragments was put together with information on the stone type (sandstone or limestone), the decoration themes and the inscriptions. A major achievement was the collation of the drawings of the reliefs and inscriptions on the c. 170 fragments of the sandstone sarcophagus of Saroy. It was possible to join together the tracings of the inscribed and decorated fragments of the two sides, as well as the foot- and the head-ends of the box of the sarcophagus; more than 80% could be thus joined. The actual sandstone fragments of the sides were then reassembled flat on the ground and photographed and the fragments of the ends were also put together and photographed. The larger pieces were then placed on the fragments of the base in the burial chamber. Fortunately enough could be pieced together to make it possible to establish the shape and all the dimensions of the box. Not nearly as many pieces of the lid were preserved so that it was impossible to reconstruct it in the same way, but the total height of the foot-end could be established.

The tomb of Amenmose (TT149), which abuts TT233 to the north, was surveyed. In this first season of work on this tomb, notes were made of the condition of the tomb with a description of what is preserved. It was established that the name attributed to the wife of the tomb-owner by Porter and Moss is mistaken; there she is identified as Sitmut but in fact a closer examination of the inscriptions indicates that her name was Baket(en)mut. A survey of the material lying around in the tomb identified two funerary cones, one belonging to 'the scribe who counts the cattle of Amun throughout the nomes of Upper and Lower Egypt' and the other to 'the scribe of the mat' Senhotep. Both these men are already well-known to us from finds of cones made during previous excavations of TT148 and TT233 in earlier seasons. A photographic record of the present overall state of the tomb and its courtyard as well as more detailed working photos of the surviving decoration of the tomb were made.

15. Monks in the Pharaohs' tombs: recovering Coptic-era monasticism in the ancient Egyptian landscape of Akhmim

Researchers: K. Parry; M. Choat

Funding: MURDG (2010–2011)

The second and final season of this project (until more funding is secured) took place at El-Haragsa in the district of Sohag in December 2010. At this time, the mountain was surveyed and many more monastic cells were located and recorded. A large stone structure was planned, and a number of long inscriptions were recorded. A publication arising from this grant is being prepared, and an ARC DP application for further work at the site was submitted in 2011 ('Christian hermitages from late antiquity in the desert regions of Upper Egypt', CIs Parry, Choat, Ghica, Tristant); see www.acrc.mq.edu.au/monastic-remains.html.

16. Beyond the city wall: the landscapes of Aquileia

Researcher: A. Traviglia

Funding: MQRF (2010-2012); MQSN (2011).

In October/November 2010 and April / May 2011 Traviglia carried out research at the University of Venice, University of Trieste, University of Udine, and the National archives of Venice, Trieste, Gorizia, and Udine on this project, and carried out fieldwork at the site of Aquileia (Udine, Italy). The next field season will take place in November 2011.

17. In paludibus moenia constituta. The reconstruction of the Roman landscapes of Aquileia through historical cartography and archive data

Researcher : A. Traviglia

Funding: Australian Academy of Humanities Travelling Fellowship (2011)

In April/May 2011 Traviglia undertook research at the National Archives of Venice, Trieste, Gorizia, Udine, and the University of Venice, University of Trieste, University of Udine, related to this project; the next fieldwork season will take place in November 2011.

18. Australian Carsulae Archaeological Project

Researchers: A. Traviglia, K. van Dyke (Museum of Ancient Cultures); J. McKenzie-Clark (Museum of Ancient Cultures)

Funding: VC's Office of Advancement (2011-2012)

In October 2011, Traviglia worked at the National Museums of Terni, Orvieto, Perugia, Todi and other local collections on this project, before the team had its first fieldwork season at the site of Carsulae (Terni, Italy).

19. Abu Rawash Project

Researchers: Y. Tristant

Funding: Institut français d'archéologie orientale (2011-2014)

Situated 8km to the northwest of the Giza Plateau and 15km to the West of Cairo, the archaeological region of Abu Rawash belongs to the northern end of the Memphite Necropolis region. The Abu Rawash area is made up of archaeological sites that include many different periods, ranging from the Predynastic through until the Coptic Period. The earliest occupation corresponds to the Early Dynastic 'M' Cemetery, which is situated upon a small knoll east of the plateau of Abu Rawash. This cemetery was investigated by Pierre Montet in 1913 and 1914. This archaeologist studied 25 elite tombs made of mud-bricks dating from Nagada IIIC2 (middle of 1st Dynasty), but results obtained during that time remain to a great extent unpublished.

On behalf of the French Archaeological Institute (IFAO), the intent of the project started in 2007 is to initiate a re-excavation of the 1st Dynasty M Cemetery, which would enable us to understand better the earliest activity in the area, its relationship to the Early Dynastic Period and the region as a whole. The aims of the project are two fold: to better understand the development of funeral architecture during the Archaic Period and to reinstate Abu Rawash to its former prestigious status, as it has been left in the shade for too long. ## 20. Wadi Araba project

Funding: Institut français d'archéologie orientale (2011-2014)

The third season of the survey of the French project in the Wadî 'Araba was undertaken from November 23rd to December 12th 2010. The work started late on 1st December 2010 because of missing military permissions. The scientific members of the expedition were Dr. Yann Tristant (director), Prehistorian and archaeologist (IFAO, Cairo); Dr. Grégory Marouard, archaeologist (Oriental Institute, Chicago). The Supreme Council of Egyptian Antiquities was represented by Mr. Aid Hussein Aid Mohamed (Suez Inspectorate).

The aim of the project is to record all the extant archaeological sites present in the Wadî 'Araba valley. During the third season of the survey, our work was focused on the middle part of the survey area, between Wadî Birayda, Gebel Galala North and the northern part of the Zafarana-Koreimat asphalt road. The area covered during the survey was around 25 x 20km (500 km<sup>2</sup>).

During this third season we visited a total of 104 new sites/archaeological features including Pharaonic sites and tracks; ancient and modern Bedouin camps; rock art engravings; visual landmarks; unidentified cairns and stone features; modern abandoned military camps. See www.ifao.egnet.net/archeologie/wadi-araba/

21. Helwan project

Researchers: Yann Tristant; Christiana Köhler (University of Vienna)

Funding: Executive Dean's Discretionary Funds, Faculty of Arts (2011-2014)

Helwan necropolis comprises thousands of graves dating to the Early Dynastic and early Old Kingdom periods (c. 3200-2600 B.C.E.) and primarily served the lower and middle class inhabitants of the early city of Memphis. Over the past 14 years of excavations the Australian (and Austrian since 2010) mission has uncovered more than 200 previously unexplored graves of these periods which provide valuable information pertaining to burial customs, funerary architecture, material culture, craft specialization, funerary beliefs, bioarchaeology and social organization of the time.

The 14th season of excavations at Helwan began in 2010. Work yielded new tombs dating from the 1st to the 4th dynasties. These were mapped and their contents recorded. A field school was also begun during this season, in which Australian and Egyptian trainees were introduced to the techniques of archaeological fieldwork, conservation, and recording. Although the vast majority of graves were robbed repeatedly already in ancient times, it was sometimes still possible to observe well preserved archaeological contexts as well as certain details on artifacts that possibly allow for insights into rituals performed for or at the funeral.

22. Civil War and its Aftermath: Interpreting the Egyptian Middle Kingdom Art and Inscriptions in the Tomb of Khnumhotep II at Beni Hassan

Researchers: A. Woods; N. Kanawati; D. Gore

Funding: MQRDG (2010-2011)

June-July 2011 were spent at Beni Hassan in Upper Egypt recording and studying the well preserved tomb of Khnum-hotep II. The inscriptions of the tomb contain one of the longest and most complete autobiographies of the Middle Kingdom and the scenes depict many activities, the most unusual of which shows a group of Asiatics being received in the province by the tomb owner. A great amount of these scenes and inscriptions have been recorded and are being researched for publication.
